Presentation Structure (25%)

7.5 / 10

You did a good job introducing yourself and the topic. Your presentation ran the right length of time. It can be difficult to judge length like this but you did a good job.

I liked your presentation because it was well structured. It had a definite introduction, main section and a useful set of conclusions. It is sometimes useful to repeat important points in a presentation. While you don't want to be too repetitious, it's okay to repeat key points using different words each time. It's often helpful to tell the audience what direction your presentation is taking. You can do that using phrases such as "Next I'll discuss ..." or "Now we will consider ...".

You wrapped up the presentation very well.

Knowledge Of Material (25%)

8 / 10

It was good to see that you did not have to rely on notes to deliver your talk. You obviously knew the material and had rehearsed your presentation so that you could deliver it smoothly and with confidence. Your use of cue cards was good. You only referred to them occasionally and their size was unobtrusive.

Quality Of Slides/Visual Aids (25%)

8.5 / 10

You had the right number of slides for the time available.

Your slides were easy to read. A few of your slides contained too much writing. If you have too much writing on a slide then people either will not read it, or they will read it but will stop listening to what you are saying. Try to limit yourself to no more than seven lines of text, with each line having no more than eight words. You selected some good images to use in your presentation. The text on some of your slides was too small to read. Never use fonts smaller than 14 points and make sure that the text on any imported diagrams is at least 14 points too. The slides you used were well designed and had the right amount of content.

Content (25%)

9 / 10

Your presentation addressed all the key points that it needed to - it was very comprehensive. The key concepts presented during your talk were arranged well with well-defined links between them.

Voice, Pace And Confidence

You spoke loudly and clearly so that the entire audience were able to hear and understand what you said. You made good eye contact during your presentation. You looked directly at several members of the audience which is a good thing to do.

You delivered your presentation at an appropriate pace allowing time for the audience to take in the key points of what you said and what you presented on the slide.

People who have confidence in what they are saying inspire trust in their audience. You spoke with confidence which help convince the audience that you knew what you were talking about.

Throughout your presentation you adopted a good solid and confident stance.

Concluding Remarks

Overall, a very good presentation Xulin. Your talk was an important part of an integrated team presentation.
